Tyrol, Austria (April 7, 2026): Five-star family resort in the Austrian Alps, Schlosshotel Fiss has unveiled details of its 2026/2027 expansion and the debut of The PeaX, a groundbreaking youth adventure zone arriving in summer 2027. As a beloved Tyrolean destination known for its wellbeing, gourmet excellence and family-centric skiing and experiences, the resort's latest expansion including two ski-in & ski-out lifts promises even greater ease to access the slopes for the upcoming ski season. In partnership with renowned architecture and interior design studio NOA, the project introduces a beautifully curated collection of new highlights at the hotel.

“Kids often know Schlosshotel Fiss from their very first time skiing. This is why it is important for us to create something suitable for their next stage of life,” shares Owner and Managing Director Simone

Domenig, “The PeaX will be a place where kids can truly experience and learn something in such an exciting and entertaining way that one visit definitely won’t be enough to discover everything.”

Winter 2026/27: Elevated Ski Offerings

The new winter expansion is designed to reimagine the guest’s journey to the slopes, with the opening of the reimagined Sport Shop and Ski Depot. This hub will offer ski and snowboard rentals and an innovative smart storage system that ensures secure storage for skis, snowboards, boots, helmets and gloves, featuring integrated ventilation to keep all equipment dry and comfortably tempered.

Access to the slopes will be more convenient than ever as the resort will modernize its slope entrance with two ski-in & ski-out lifts. An additional benefit for guests, especially those staying in the east wing, is the new direct access from the spa reception to the sport shop, allowing guests to head straight onto the slopes even faster.

The PeaX – A New Adventure Zone for Young Guests

In July 2027, Schlosshotel Fiss will transform its family experience with the opening of The PeaX adventure zone. Spanning approximately 25,000 square feet, the new adventure world is intentionally designed for both children and teenagers, offering them their own space to explore, move and play. The indoor experience will feature zones like the Valo Jump and a climbing zone where children can scale walls up to three floors high within the Patios. The PeaX will also hold a creative kitchen, which is home to the Kid Academy, a supervised program that invites the entire family to discover the joy of food together through playful cooking and baking courses. The space also includes an atelier for discovering crafts, painting, and clay, all balanced by quiet relaxation areas.

The adventure continues with the outdoor expansion set to debut in September 2027, which will include a rope course, fitness trails, a bobby car track, and immersive water and sand play areas. Among the new outdoor thrills is a massive slide over 160 feet long, offering a unique adrenaline rush for the hotel’s young guests.

The Architectural Vision

The architectural concept for the new expansion, curated by NOA, centers on a main crystal structure as a play and orientation point. The design uses a palette of concrete, glass, and steel, alongside natural elements of wood, stone, and sand.

“The concept draws inspiration from the forms of the Alpine landscape, particularly the hollowed, irregular surfaces of glacial crevasses, mountain gorges, and rock fissures,” shares Architect Giulia Prevedello. “Guests should feel as if they are entering a cave shaped by cracks and ice crystals. These are transformed into architectural elements, like patios and glazed fissures, that capture natural light and guide it into the interior of the building.”

The interior is flooded with light through two mountain crystal patios and a jagged roofscape with glacier-like light fissures. The metal staircase acts as a bridge over ‘glacier crevasses’ creating a space that mimics the surrounding landscape.

Interior designer Alin Messner illustrates the focus on guest experience sharing, “Special attention was given to light and its journey through the three levels of the building. Solutions such as prefabricated perforated concrete panels filter the light in fascinating ways while also serving as acoustic regulators. The patios guide light downwards and, together with the glazed fissures, create a dramatic effect at night. Mirrors multiply reflections and generate a sense of lightness that subtly expands the perception of space.”

Through the connection between indoor and outdoor spaces, The PeaX ensures a balanced interaction of movement, imagination and relaxation for the young guests at Schlosshotel Fiss.
